The Collect

Most merciful God, who by the death and resurrection of your Son Jesus Christ delivered and saved the world: grant that by faith in him who suffered on the cross we may triumph in the power of his victory; through Jesus Christ your Son our Lord, who is alive and reigns with you, in the unity of the Holy Spirit, one God, now and for ever. AMEN

A reading from the prophet Isaiah

Thus says the LORD, who makes a way in the sea, a path in the mighty waters, who brings out chariot and horse, army and warrior; they lie down, they cannot rise, they are extinguished, quenched like a wick: Do not remember the former things, or consider the things of old. I am about to do a new thing; now it springs forth, do you not perceive it? I will make a way in the wilderness and rivers in the desert. The wild animals will honour me, the jackals and the ostriches; for I give water in the wilderness, rivers in the desert, to give drink to my chosen people, the people whom I formed for myself so that they might declare my praise.

Psalm 126

R/ The Lord has indeed done great things for us.

When the Lord restored the fortunes of Zion, then were we like those who dream. Then was our mouth filled with laughter and our tongue with songs of joy. Then said they among the nations, 'The Lord has done great things for them.' The Lord has indeed done great things for us, and therefore we rejoiced.

R/ The Lord has indeed done great things for us.

Restore again our fortunes, O Lord, as the river beds of the desert. Those who sow in tears shall reap with songs of joy. Those who go out weeping, bearing the seed, will come back with shouts of joy, bearing their sheaves with them.

R/ The Lord has indeed done great things for us.

A reading from the letter of St Paul to the Philippians [3; 4b-14]

If anyone else has reason to be confident in the flesh, I have more: circumcised on the eighth day, a member of the people of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew born of Hebrews; as to the law, a Pharisee; as to zeal, a persecutor of the church; as to righteousness under the law, blameless.

Yet whatever gains I had, these I have come to regard as loss because of Christ. More than that, I regard everything as loss because of the surpassing value of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord. For his sake I have suffered the loss of all things, and I regard them as rubbish, in order that I may gain Christ and be found in him, not having a righteousness of my own that comes from the law, but one that comes through faith in Christ, the righteousness from God based on faith. I want to know Christ and the power of his resurrection and the sharing of his sufferings by becoming like him in his death, if somehow I may attain the resurrection from the dead. Not that I have already obtained this or have already reached the goal; but I press on to make it my own, because Christ Jesus has made me his own. Beloved, I do not consider that I have made it my own; but this one thing I do: forgetting what lies behind and straining forward to what lies ahead, I press on towards the goal for the prize of the heavenly call of God in Christ Jesus.

Gradual Hymn

Praise to you, Lord Jesus Christ,
King of endless glory.

Praise to you, Lord Jesus Christ,
King of endless glory.

If anyone serves me, says the Lord, he must follow me; Wherever I am, my servant will be there also.

Praise to you, Lord Jesus Christ,
King of endless glory.

The Lord be with you:

And also with you

Listen to the Gospel of Christ
according to St John

Glory to you, O Lord.

Six days before the Passover Jesus came to Bethany, the home of Lazarus, whom he had raised from the dead. There they gave a dinner for him. Martha served, and Lazarus was one of those at the table with him. Mary took a pound of costly perfume made of pure nard, anointed Jesus' feet, and wiped them with her hair. The house was filled with the fragrance of the perfume. But Judas Iscariot, one of his disciples (the one who was about to betray him), said, 'Why was this perfume not sold for three hundred denarii and the money given to the poor?' (He said this not because he cared about the poor, but because he was a thief; he kept the common purse and used to steal what was put into it.) Jesus said, 'Leave her alone. She bought it so that she might keep it for the day of my burial. You always have the poor with you, but you do not always have me.

(St John 12.1-8)

Praise to you, O Christ

A Prayer of Spiritual Communion

My Jesus, I believe that you are in the Blessed Sacrament. I love you above all things, and I long for you in my soul. Since I cannot now receive you sacramentally, come at least spiritually into my heart. As though you have already come, I embrace you and unite myself entirely to you; never permit me to be separated from you. Amen.

The Jereboam Interview

We continue our series of extracts from the Jerusalem and Galilee Gazette, an imaginary first-century newspaper. Week by week the correspondent Jereboam interviews various people whose lives have been affected in some way by Jesus Christ and his teaching.

Thanks to the Parish of St Catharine's Chipping Campden & to the author for permission to reproduce 'Jereboam'

Rebecca

'Jereboam' today is based on St John 8. 1-11

Rebecca: Excuse me, sir: you write those articles about Jesus, don't you?

Jereboam: Yes, I do.

Rebecca: That man is the most wonderful person in the whole world! Do you think you could possibly mention in one of your articles that someone called Rebecca thinks he's absolutely wonderful?

Jereboam: Well, I could, yes, but it might be better if we gave some reasons.

Rebecca: All right. He's just saved my mother's life, single-handedly. There was a group of men who had decided to stone her - presumably to death - after she was discovered with a man, doing...doing the sort of thing she shouldn't do with anyone apart from my father.

Jereboam: I think I understand what you mean.

Rebecca: It's not that I'm excusing her or anything, but when men like that decide to stone someone, don't they ever stop to think what will happen to any children involved? It's only thanks to Jesus that my mother's still alive.

Jereboam: How did he stop them?

Rebecca: He simply told them that the first stone should be thrown by whichever one of them had never committed a sin. That made them think all right.

Jereboam: I imagine it did.

Rebecca: I can't help noticing that no-one seems too bothered about stoning the man she was with...

Jereboam: No - I can't say that I'm altogether surprised about that. You must feel terrible: it's a very difficult situation for you, even without the threat of stoning.

Rebecca: It is upsetting, yes.

Obviously, like everyone else I'm the product of my mother and my father, so knowing that my mother was acting like that...well, it's like being split down the middle. Jesus appreciated my feelings; I knew that from the way he put his hand on my shoulder. And he told my mother in no uncertain terms to behave herself better in future. That's a bit different from throwing stones, though.

Jereboam: Do you think your mother will have learnt her lesson?

Rebecca: It's too early to say: maybe. She does tend to have cravings for things – all sorts of things. Then when she finally gets hold of whatever it is, it doesn't actually make her particularly happy after all. I guess this is just another example of the same type of situation... But you never know: perhaps Jesus could help her. He seems the sort of straightforward, understanding person who could guide her towards a happier life. I think I'll offer to go with her to one of his talks.

Jereboam: Look, thanks for speaking to me. You're a very sensible young lady, and I hope that everything works out for you and your family.

Rebecca: Thank you, sir.

Thought for the Week

"For in truth, through Jesus Christ, the message of God's beauty triumphs over the message of melancholy, evil, and suffering in this world for all time. The inner beauty of God shows itself stronger than despair, hate, falsehood, violence, and suffering, as the Crucified One opens his arms wide to all people from the Cross, and from the midst of His Passion, pain, and the ugliness of His dereliction, says, "Forgive them, Father, they know not what they do."

- Andrew Richards,
"Contemplation of God"

This Week

Today we hear the story from St John's Gospel of Jesus' anointing by Mary on the eve of his entry into Jerusalem. The first readings this week prepare for the gospels. We begin with the long, but well worth reading, story of Susanna, which ends in "blessing God who saves those who hope in him." The bronze serpent on a pole reminds us of Jesus' saving cross. Three young men refuse to commit idolatry and show us how God protects "the servants who trusted in him." God entered a covenant with Abraham. In the midst of his persecution, Jeremiah praises God, "For he has rescued the life of the poor from the power of the wicked!" God promises to unite the people in an everlasting covenant.

Our gospels this week are again from St John. Jesus continues to challenge the Pharisees, who plot his arrest. Jesus challenges those who do not believe in him: "I know where I came from and where I am going." Reminding us of the bronze serpent and his death, Jesus says, "When you lift up the Son of Man, then you will realize that I AM." To the children of Abraham and to us Jesus declares, "If you remain in my word, you will truly be my disciples and you will know the truth, and the truth will set you free." "Whoever keeps my word will never see death. ... Amen, amen, I say to you, before Abraham came to be, I AM." They heard what they thought was blasphemy and tried to stone him. Jesus simply told the truth, because, "the Father is in me and I am in the Father." After the raising of Lazarus, the plans were set to destroy Jesus. The high priest says the prophetic words, "it is better for you that one man should die instead of the people, so that the whole nation may not perish."

Next Sunday: On Palm Sunday, we begin Holy Week. We hear the gospel about Jesus' entry into Jerusalem, St Paul's invitation to us to imitate Jesus who emptied himself, and the whole Passion narrative, this year from St Luke.

A Homily for The Fifth Sunday of Lent

+ On this Fifth Sunday of Lent the atmosphere of the Church's liturgy changes abruptly. We are standing on the brink of something which has about it an air of expectation and foreboding. The words of Isaiah from the first reading take on a fresh resonance for us: "Do not consider the former things or consider the things of old. I am about to do a new thing; now it springs forth, do you not perceive it?"

God is about to do something new, something startlingly original. We come almost to the walls of the Holy City of Jerusalem itself, the place where the events of the Christian Passover will unfold - the events we will remember and live through during Holy Week and the Easter Triduum, those three great days at the end of Lent and the beginning of Easter.

This air of expectation and foreboding is almost tangible in today's Gospel. There are all kinds of echoes here for us - Mary's fragrant offering recalls the gifts of the magi - the myrrh for embalming the dead. This is a very strange event; as a meal it tends to look forward to and foreshadow another more celebrated meal which Jesus ate with his Apostles on the night he was betrayed. But here we have seated at table presumably as the host, one who has been brought back from the dead, and the one who has restored him to life is himself reflecting on his own impending death and verbally clashing with the one who will deliver him into the hands of his enemies. We almost feel the darkness and the threat of violence closing in.

Yet once again we see Jesus, who will be the innocent victim whose life is offered for the life of the world, refusing what we might call "victim status." He is the only one who has any conscious idea of what is about to happen, although Mary Magdalene seems subconsciously to understand. Everyone else is still in denial, even perhaps Judas himself. And here Jesus is still concerned to prepare them, to teach them why events must unfold in the way they do. By itself, the action of Mary anointing his feet seems emotionally and financially extravagant as Judas points out; what she does is given meaning by the words Our Lord uses to describe what she has done - this is an anointing, an embalming prior to his death. "You will not always have me with you," he says to them to underline what he has just implied.

Throughout the New Testament we find a shocking simplicity and that simplicity becomes even more explicit as we approach the events of Holy Week and Easter. Christ does not merely teach the truth, He is the truth; He does not merely show us the way, He is the way; He does not merely give us eternal life, He is that life. How can all these universal values and truths be really and completely present in one individual? Only if that Person is himself universal as well as human; only by the Incarnation; only by what C. S. Lewis called "myth become fact".

It's this shocking simplicity which underlies our whole faith.

For St John, Mary's action in anointing Jesus' feet in today's Gospel indicates her recognition of Jesus as Messiah and more than that, and her wiping of his feet with her hair her submission before him in humility and adoration. John is that Mary believes that her place, and her place is our place too, is at the feet of Jesus, in worship and adoration. This is no mere earthly teacher who stands before her, and she recognises this with her whole being.

And the question of who Jesus is absolutely central here. In Jesus we see our God who shares our life and death to free us from sin - and by that we mean our falling short in some way of who we could be - so the things we should take personal responsibility for, and those habits of behaviour we inherit through the process of history and the general messiness of human life - to bring us back into full relationship with him. This is God's great act of solidarity with the human race, made not as a gesture or merely a symbol, but as the ultimate act of love which leads us to the new life of resurrection. The cross helps to answer our questions about meaning; in a mysterious way it helps us make sense of things. In the crucified Lord, lifted up from the earth, we see what the love of God is all about, a love which holds nothing back, which has no limits placed upon it. In Jesus, crucified and risen, we meet God, the focus of our lives, the source of all our freedom and the reason for our hope and joy.

By relating the episode of the anointing of Jesus, St John gives what happened a clear theological meaning. The death of Jesus is not to be conceived of as tragedy or the triumph of evil over good. The divine purpose is at work here. In the midst of all the cynical political schemes that are being plotted, by Judas among others, Mary's anointing of Jesus gives us a beautiful demonstration of gratitude, love, and devotion. And it says to those who were present and to us that this death is like no other. Nothing, not even all the political and religious powers of the day, can stand in the way of our salvation.

His passion and death are somehow the key to a more profound understanding of the meaning of the world and of the purpose of our lives. This may be a strange thing to say, but in the cross we don't only see Christ, we also see ourselves. To stand at the foot of the cross is to begin to be united with him in his sacrifice and in his dying to himself in order to live for us. At the heart of his message is the need to let go our selfishness and egoism so we might experience the life of God.

Here, now, as we celebrate the unfolding story of our redemption, as we spend time in prayer, the events of the Gospel come alive for us. We will see and encounter him in a particularly intense and personal way through the celebration of the liturgies of Holy Week which is why we should really do everything we can to experience as much of them as we possibly can. We meet Christ, and he draws us to himself, in the all the sacraments, especially when we come together at the Eucharist to offer his death and to receive his life in Holy Communion.

Our following of Jesus doesn't end with his death - for by it, he makes all things new through his resurrection. And so we come back to those strange words of the prophet Isaiah with which we began: "Do not consider the former things or consider the things of old. I am about to do a new thing; now it springs forth, do you not perceive it?" +

Approach to the Cross

O Lord Christ, Lamb of God,
call us, who are called to be saints,
along the way of thy Cross;
draw us, who would draw nearer
our king, to the foot of thy Cross;
cleanse us, who are not worthy
to approach, with the pardon
of thy Cross;
instruct us, the ignorant and blind,
in the school of thy Cross;
arm us, for the battles of holiness,
by the might of thy Cross;
bring us, in the fellowship
of thy sufferings, to the victory
of thy Cross;
and seal us, in the kingdom
of thy glory, among the servants
of thy Cross;
who with the Father and the Holy Ghost livest and reignest, one God, almighty, eternal, world without end.

A Prayer for Ukraine

written by Ukrainain Christians

O Lord our God, look down with mercy on the Ukrainian people. Protect and save them from the unjust aggressors who seek to subdue them. Grant them steadfast trust in your mercy and protection.

O Mother of God, who gave us your miraculous icon at Zarvanytsia, intercede for the Ukrainian people, who run to the shelter of your mercy in their times of need.

O Lord Jesus Christ, have mercy on us. Grant peace and protection to the people of Ukraine. Give them strength and courage to defend what is good, right, and holy. Keep them safe from harm and provide for all their needs, both temporal and spiritual. Hear our prayers, O Lord, and deliver us from distress, for You are merciful and compassionate and love mankind. To you we give glory: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, now and for ever. Amen.

Prayers are being offered daily for the people of the Ukraine at St Arvans Church. The church is open during the hours of daylight, and a prayer and an icon have been placed on the Lady Chapel altar as a focus for our prayers.

The Upcycling Warehouse in Chepstow (opposite Chepstow Railway Station) is collecting refugee relief goods for Ukraine. They are on their way to Poland in vans this week and intend to go every week. In connection with this, Emma Low from St Arvans is collecting items to be sent to the borders of Ukraine to assist those fleeing from the violence of the Russian invasion. They are now in need of first aid items and dried food (well withinin sell-by date, please)

There is a box at the back of St Arvans Church for those who wish to donate.

The Fashion Show with Harts of Monmouth

on 25th March raised £365 for St Arvans church funds. Many thanks again to Jean and all who helped with the evening.

Ministry Area Prayer

Dear Lord, we thank you for the opportunity to work together as a Ministry Area.

May we engage with each other with faith and encouragement.

May we manage each situation with wisdom and mutual respect.

May we serve with integrity, creativity and purpose.

May we speak with openness and gentleness.

May we offer our gifts, time and finances with generosity.

May we face each challenge with courage and the desire to grow through it.

May we all be drawn deeper into our relationship with you and be known as your disciples.

Help us to show your love, proclaim your Good News and grow your Kingdom in this place.

We ask this in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Saviour. AMEN
